Welcome to South Carolina Agritourism!

Looking for a family-friendly outing that takes you outdoors and leaves you with a better understanding of where your food comes from? Interested in exploring rural South Carolina and learning about life on farms, ranches, and other agricultural settings?

South Carolina is home to many agritourism sites that are open for the public to enjoy. From complicated corn mazes to beautiful scenery, agritourism has something to offer people of all ages.

When visiting farms as part of our state's agritourism experience, please remember that these are working farms, where daily tasks and responsibilities keep the farm running smoothly. Farmers work hard to care for their crops, livestock, and land, often following a strict schedule to ensure the well-being of their animals and the success of their harvest. If your visit includes areas with farm animals, be mindful that their feeding, milking, and general care happen at set times, and disruptions can affect both the animals and the farmers. We encourage all visitors to enjoy the beauty of farm life while respecting the dedication and routine that make these farms thrive.

Visit SCFarmFun.org to plan your agritourism adventure!

South Carolina Agritourism Association

Farms aren't just for food any more. The South Carolina Agritourism Association (SCAA) helps farmers develop and implement strategies for marketing and selling "the farm experience" to an ever-growing audience of interested visitors. SCAA offers agritourism farmers the opportunity to network with peers, share best practices, and find answers to challenges like admission tax and liability insurance. Created by the South Carolina Department of Agriculture, SCAA helps its members attract tourists to the more rural areas of the state and capitalize on the strong local food movement and the opportunity to put a price tag on agritourism attractions. To find out more about SCAA and its programs, visit SCAgritourism.org.
